

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

RS19641

Recent research shows that people with epilepsy who have control of their seizures using prescription drugs sometimes experience seizures, or other adverse effects, when the formulation of their anti-epileptic drugs is changed. Pharmacists sometimes select a different therapeutically equivalent drug product when dispensing a drug. In cases where prescribers have designated a medication is to treat seizures or epilepsy, if a pharmacist is going to change the product they shall notify the physician and the patient.
